

“As we draw to a close our 100th season, our priority is the same: continued focus on initiatives designed to improve player health and safety.

Over the past few years, we’ve made tremendous progress in our effort to make the game we love safer for its players.

But there’s still work to be done. In 2020, we will continue to support the world’s leading researchers, as well as create incentives and champion new innovations around protective equipment. We will continue to strive to facilitate unparalleled care for the players, on and off the field.”

ROGER GOODELL
NFL Commissioner

“The NFL connects the best and brightest minds in medicine, science, engineering and data through our funding initiatives, and creates incentives for innovators to evolve the analytics, game and equipment.”

JOHN YORK, M.D.
Chairman of the NFL Owners’ Health and Safety Advisory Committee,
Co-Chairman, San Francisco 49ers

“I’m proud of the progress we have made and the work that’s been done to date, and know we’ll continue to pursue even greater advancements in player health and safety in the future.”

ALLEN SILLS, M.D.
NFL Chief Medical Officer

ALLEN
SILLS
Allen Sills